SLE

Mission

The SLE at the Humboldt-Universität Berlin has been training young postgraduates from all fields in international development cooperation and management for over four decades. More than 700 people have graduated from the SLE, and are now working in international development cooperation for private, international, and bilateral agencies. The SLE is funded by the Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development and the Senate of Berlin.

Target Group

The SLE plus: Berlin Training for International Development Cooperation is directed at young professionals from all fields working in development cooperation. By selecting participants with different professional and cultural backgrounds from all over the world, the programme follows the intercultural and interdisciplinary approach vital to development cooperation.

Training Philosophy

Learning by doing is the key element of the SLE's teaching philosophy. Case studies, exercises and role play help to create an environment of common learning where participants can put acquired methods into practice. All courses are accompanied by a framework programme that provides participants with the opportunity to become familiar with scholarly discussions in the area of development cooperation, and to meet with representatives of German governmental and non-governmental organisations active in the field of development cooperation.

Requirements

A university degree equivalent to an M.A./M.Sc. and have a good command of English.

Costs and Scholarships

Costs for each course: Euro 500.-

The SLE will be of assistance in finding adequate accommodation. Alumni of German Universities from developing countries or holders of a German surpluse scholarship may apply for DAAD funded scholarships. Staff members of NGOs in new EU-Member States are eligible for financial support by TRIAOLG.
